Positive psychology principles, including the role of companionate love and social support, are trending strong in the worksite health promotion field. Dr. Sara Johnson, HERO member and Co-Editor of the Art and Science of Health Promotion has edited a fascinating series of articles showing how “Social Connection” can have a major impact on well-being. This section of the American Journal of Health Promotion is open access and available to all. Dr. Johnson offers a stellar review of related literature and among the articles featured is one about “what’s love got to do with it” from Olivia (Mandy) O’Neal, one of our keynote speakers from HEROForum17.
